THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

First Bay's Free THE Republican National Convention met in the International Exposition building The Convention was expected to assemble at high noon, but such was the delay of the delegates and notables in putting in an appearance, aided by incomplete arrangements for the distribution of tickets of admission, that it was fully one o'clock before At five minutes after one Senator Don National Committee, called the Convention the Secretary to read the call for the asseming of the Couvention, and then delivered short address, counseling harmony and the emination of candidates certain to be elect-

-The following little narrative from an English paper illustrates the charac-ter of a good many calculations and es-timates that purport to rest on a better basis than the off-hand assertion to which the story relates: A gentleman giving evidence before a parliamentary committee said that in some districts the number of crows upon a farm would average at least fifty; that the birds were of great service in destroying wireworms, and where they did not exist the farmer was obliged to hire boys to do the work of the crow, paying them at the rate of three-half-pence per 100 worms. Mr. Bright inquired how much color best, and while admitting more a boy could earn worm killing, and was light than green, keep out the red or told 9d, but when asked if a boy made told 9d, but when asked if a boy made 9d. a day at the rate of three-half-pence -A heaping teaspoonful of sulphur, added once a week to the feed of a cow, will keep it free from vermin. The same quantity is recommended for every ten fowls for a similar purpose.

a hundred wireworms, how many of these noxious creatures he destroyed in a day, the witness, turning restive, replied that he did not come there to answer arithmetical question. Mr. Bright, however, was not to be put off in that way. He asked if a boy did the work as well as a crow. "A crow is worth fifty boys!" was the rash reply. Then quoth Mr. Bright: "If a boy is worth 9d, a day, and a crow worth fifty boys, how much is the crow worth to the -A heaping teaspoonful of sulphur, a hundred wireworms, how many of how much is the crow worth to the farmer in money?" Not unnaturally the gentleman lost his temper, but in vain. Paper, pen and ink were handed to him, and, after battling with the fig-ures for a while, he announced that a to him, and, after battling with the figures for a while, he announced that a crow was worth 37s. 6d. a day to the farmer. He was then asked to inform the committee what, at that rate, was the yearly value of the bird, and, of course, dould not make it less than course, could not make it less than £684 7s. 6d. His persecutor next re-minded the badgered man that he had

Boil America follows its owner like a spaniel, and the jacana acts as a guard to poul-try, protecting them in the fields all day from birds of prey, and escorting them home at night. In the Shetland Isles there is a gull which defends the flock low the water to soak well around the roots, and if this must be done while a privileged bird. The chamois, bounding over the mountain, are indebted for their safety in no small degree to a species of pheasants. The bird acts as a sentinel, for as soon as it gets sight of a man it whistles, upon which the chamois, knowing the hunters to be near, sets off at full speed. The artifices which partridges and plovers employ to delude their enemies from the nest of their young may be referred to as a case in point, as well as the adroit contrivance of the hind for the preservation of her young; for when she hears the sound of dogs she puts herself in the way of the hunters, and starts in a direction to draw them away from her fawns. Instances of the effect of grief upon animals are no less remarkable. Kaimes relates an instance of a canary which, while singing to a mate hatching her eggs in a cage, fell dead; the female left the nest, and, finding him dead, rejected all food, and died by his side.

to find the aggregate annual value to the

But, suppose circumstances force her to this contact, should she not have the same facilities and advantages as the opposite sex? I will admit that some women make poor mothers, but there are just as many incompetent men. As a rule, women are honest, diligent and economical where they are dependent upon their own exertions. Nothing takes the nonsense out of them sooner than work. When they are too fumery; it is used in many disenses, think less of captivating, less of the
